The Dean's Corner: Facing East Together

All Saints' is one of my favorite feast days of the Christian year. We celebrate baptism and the life of sainthood to which our baptism calls us. We learn about those whose particular lives of holiness and witness taught us what a God-centered life can look like. We also remember and lift up loved ones who have died.

All Saints' is the feast day of the communion of saints: on All Saints' the family of God comes together through time to be the Church in all its fullness.

"And so about two years I watched you people and I said, "There's something special about this place. There's something special!... So I was able to come and have a seat, and I couldn't believe the service. I was like, they actually use the Old Testament too?... Wow. I mean, they actually preach here. They talk about the Word, they talk about service, and this is why I'm here."

Episcopal Peace Fellowship: Pray, Study, Act

The Episcopal Peace Fellowship (EPF) is an American peace organization composed of churches and members of the Episcopal Church and invites persons and organizations of other faiths and traditions to participate. EPF will soon turn 80-years-old, as it was founded in New York City on November 11, 1939, as the Episcopal Pacifist Fellowship with the mission to pray, study and work for peace. It adopted its current name in 1965. EPF is affiliated with the Anglican Pacifist Fellowship. Melanie Merkle Atha, who visited Trinity Cathedral recently, is the Executive Director.
During the 80 days leading up to EPF’s Eightieth Anniversary on Armistice Day, November 11, 2019, EPF has been highlighting many local acts of peace and reconciliation work.

Last week, author Nita Belles spoke about her book, "In Our Backyard - A Christian Perspective on Human Trafficking in the United States." You can read highlights of her work in Bruce Freeman's blog.
